while kierkegaard is perhaps known best as a religious thinker and philosopher there is an unmistakable literary element in his writings he often explains complex concepts and ideas by using literary figures and motifs that he could assume his readers would have some familiarity with this dimension of his thought has served to make his writings far more popular than those of other philosophers and theologians but at the same time it has made their interpretation more complex the present volume is dedicated to the treatment of the variety of literary figures and motifs he used the articles in this volume employ source work research to trace kierkegaard's understanding and use of authors from the greek tradition a series of figures of varying importance in kierkegaard's authorship are treated ranging from early greek poets to late classical philosophical schools in general it can be said that the greeks collectively constitute one of the single most important body of sources for kierkegaard's thought he studied greek from an early age and was profoundly inspired by what might be called the greek spirit although he is generally considered a christian thinker he was nonetheless consistently drawn back to the greeks for ideas and impulses on any number of topics he frequently contrasts ancient greek philosophy with its emphasis on the lived experience of the individual in daily life with the abstract german philosophy that was in vogue during his own time it has been argued that he modeled his work on that of the ancient greek thinkers specifically in order to contrast his own activity with that of his contemporaries student mobility is the most important factor in the internationalization of higher education in this book existing assumptions will be questioned that mobility is primarily south north and north north and that south south flows are rather marginal that the economic rationale has become so dominant that there are nearly no other motives to be found anymore and that the growing presence of national and international providers of higher education and opportunities for distance education reduce the need for international student mobility the dynamics of international student circulation will be analyzed on the basis of four countries egypt india indonesia and south africa which are perceived to be primarily on the sending side of student mobility and europe and the usa which are perceived to be primarily but not exclusively on the receiving side these case studies will be placed in the context of broader developments in the internationalization of higher education and related to definitions methodological issues and global data as used by unesco oecd and others this study has been undertaken by five scholars from different parts of the world in the context of the 2005 2006 new century scholars programme higher education in the twenty first century of the fulbright programme the book will be of relevance for both researchers and practitioners on globalization and the internationalization of higher education
