first published in 1998 working with the dying and bereaved illustrates how therapists can use a systemic approach to help families facing death and bereavement this approach considers the individual in a broader more holistic concept than traditional theories this book provides a broad theoretical framework and practical strategies for systemic therapeutic work each chapter demonstrates how each approach has been applied by the therapist to work within a particular model carefully outlining the particular technique used for readers of atul gawande and paul kalanithi a palliative care doctor s breathtaking stories from 30 years spent caring for the dying modern medical technology is allowing us to live longer and fuller lives than ever before and for the most part that is good news but with changes in the way we understand medicine come changes in the way we understand death once a familiar peaceful and gentle if sorrowful transition death has come to be something from which we shield our eyes as we prefer to fight desperately against it rather than accept its inevitability dr kathryn mannix has studied and practiced palliative care for thirty years in with the end in mind she shares beautifully crafted stories from a lifetime of caring for the dying and makes a compelling case for the therapeutic power of approaching death not with trepidation but with openness clarity and understanding weaving the details of her own experiences as a caregiver through stories of her patients their families and their distinctive lives dr mannix reacquaints us with the universal but deeply personal process of dying with insightful meditations on life death and the space between them with the end in mind describes the possibility of meeting death gently with forethought and preparation and shows the unexpected beauty dignity and profound humanity of life coming to an end when it is our time is there any one of us who would not hope for a gentle ending to our lives and a peaceful death yet for many this longing remains elusive fears and apprehensions cloud our understanding of what is involved in the getting there many of us choose not to think about death or even consider preparing for this second of our universal human experiences this death unease can lead to our avoiding being with a dying family member or friend sadly missing the precious chance to say goodbye it may also prevent us from taking on the challenging but vastly rewarding role of caregiver it is important to know you do not have to be alone these lessons learned from the dying themselves will show you how the final journey lived fully can be the most extraordinary of your life and yes your goodbyes can be blessed in ways you could never have imagined denial anger bargaining depression and acceptance the five stages of grief first formulated in this hugely influential work forty years ago are now part of our common understanding of bereavement the five stages were first identified by elisabeth kÅ¼bler ross in her work with dying patients at the university of chicago and were considered phases that all or most people went through when faced with the prospect of their own death they are now often accepted as a response to any major life change however in spite of these terms being in general use the subject of death is still surrounded by conventional attitudes and reticence that offer only fragile comfort because they evade the real issues this groundbreaking book is still relevant â giving a voice to dying people and exploring what impending death means to them often in their own words people speak about their experience of dying their relief in expressing their fear and anger and being able to move forward to a state of acceptance and peace ideal for all those with an interest in bereavement or the five stages of grief this book contains a new extended introduction from professor allan kellehear this additional chapter re examines on death and dying looking at how it has influenced contemporary thought and practice a gentle guide for end of life care aimed at families and caregivers caring for the dying describes a whole new way to approach death and dying it explores how the dying and their families can bring deep meaning and great comfort to the care given at the end of a life created by henry fersko weiss the end of life doula model is adapted from the work of birth doulas and helps the dying to find meaning in their life express that meaning in powerful and beautiful legacies and plan for the final days the approach calls for around the clock vigil care so the dying person and their family have the emotional and spiritual support they need along with guidance on signs and symptoms of dying it also covers the work of reprocessing a death with the family afterward and the early work of grieving emphasis is placed on the space around the dying person and encourages the use of touch guided imagery and ritual during the dying process throughout the book fersko weiss tells amazing and encouraging stories of the people he has cared for as well as stories that come from doulas he has trained and worked with over the years the guidance provided can help a dying person their family and caregivers to transform the dying experience from one of fear and despair into one that is uplifting and even life affirming you will see death in a new light and gain a different perspective on how to help the dying it may even change the way you live your life right now it is quite clear said cornish that the malgamite scheme is a fraud it is worse than that it is a murderous fraud for von holzen s new system of making malgamite is not new at all but an old system revived which was set aside many years ago as too deadly if it is not this identical system it is a variation of it they are producing the stuff for almost nothing at the cost of men s lives in plain english it is murder and it must be stopped at any cost you understand when someone we love dies suddenly or after a serious illness we re often left wondering if we could have done more how prepared are we to care for loved ones talk to children about death deal with the death of young and old and honour someone s life in this uplifting book filled with people s personal stories the authors will inspire you with their warmth wisdom and practical suggestions as they share dozens of ways to make the death and dying of those you love everything you d want it to be authors claire leimbach trypheyne mcshane and zenith virago draw on their work and experiences around death and dying to bring readers an extraordinarily compassionate practical inspiring guide to this momentous time in our lives based on his extensive counseling work with the terminally ill levine s book integrates death into the context of life with compassion skill and hope capturing the range of emotions and challenges that accompany the dying process he offers unique support to readers dealing with this difficult experience frazer s series which attempted to define the shared elements of religious belief and scientific thought discussing fertility rites human sacrifice the dying god the scapegoat and many other symbols and practices whose influences had extended into 20th century culture his thesis is that old religions were fertility cults that revolved around the worship and periodic sacrifice of a sacred king frazer proposed that mankind progresses from magic through religious belief to scientific thought this book has been written for those who must work with and give care to the dying our discussion is not simple narrative or description it is a rendition of reality informed by a rather densely woven and fairly abstract theoretical scheme this scheme evolved gradually during the course of our research the second audience for this volume is social scientists who are less interested in dying than they are in useful substantive theory our central concern is with the temporal aspects of work the theory presented here may be useful to social scientists interested in areas far removed from health medicine or hospitals the training of physicians and nurses equips them for the technical aspects of dealing with illness medical students learn not to kill patients through error and to save lives through diagnosis and treatment but their teachers put little or no emphasis on how to talk with dying patients how or whether to disclose an impending death or even how to approach the subject with the wives husbands children and parents of the dying students of nursing are taught how to give nursing care to terminal patients as well as how to give post mortem care but the psychological aspects of dealing with the dying and their families are virtually absent from training although physicians and nurses are highly skilled at handling the bodies of terminal patients their behavior to them otherwise is actually outside the province of professional standards much if not most nontechnical conduct toward and in the presence of dying patients and their families is profoundly influenced by common sense assumptions essentially untouched by professional or even rational considerations or by current advancement in social psychological knowledge the process of dying in hospitals is much affected by professional training and codes and by the particular conditions of work generated by hospitals as places of work a third important consideration in interpreting dying as a temporal process is that dying is a social as well as a biological and psychological process the term social underlines that the dying person is not simply leaving life unless he dies without kin or friends and in such a way that his death is completely undiscovered his death is recorded his dying is inextricably bound up with the life of society however insignificant his particular life may have been or how small the impact his death makes upon its future course this aspect of dying is treated in relationship to what the authors call status passage time for dying is an illumination of the temporal features of dying in hospitals as related both to the work of hospital personnel and to dying
